

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus and related method for controlling picture inversion of an LCD, determining states of vertical and horizontal sync signals. The determined states are used to insert appropriate delay periods so as to allow picture inversion to take place only when the video signal is in a section of displaying no image, thereby eliminating a noise bar that is displayed during the picture inversion operation.